

2/14 Releases "Turn This Up" 8/2

NEW YORK, NY July 27, 2024 - Following on the heels of their debut album Adrienne's Garden, "Turn This Up" is the highly anticipated follow-up single from New York City rock band, 2/14. Written and produced by vocalist/guitarist Sky Carlson, the lead single from the band's upcoming second album touches on the emotional turmoil of arguing and splitting paths with someone you love despite knowing how much you still care. "Can I hate the way you look at me?" Carlson asks, "I don't make sense and I'm hard to please."

The song recalls the best of their freshman effort while evolving compositionally, incorporating emotive 90's post-hardcore and classic pop punk throughout its 3:32 runtime. Though the band generally alternated between styles on their debut, "Turn This Up" trades off between textured, breathy verses that ramp up into explosive guitars and drums. The constant lyrical and melodic friction culminates in a poignant hook: "So turn this up, I'll tune you out...."
